Safari

Selous is special for the many rivers that come here together. By the rivers it is easy for the animals to find food and water, so it is also easy to view them. The Selous Game Reserve is one of the largest faunal reserves in the world and is unique for the number and diversity of animals that can be sighted. Elephants, hippopotami, African wild dogs, cape buffalos and crocodiles are relatively easy to find and photograph.

Selous is a wildlife park, so it has more advantages over national parks, including more freedom to explore and no time limits.

Interesting places in the park including the Rufiji River, which opens into the Indian Ocean across from Mafia Island, and the Stiegler George, a canyon of 100 meters wide and 100 meters deep. Habitats include grassland, typical acacia savannah, drasland and extensive Miombo forests. Even on busy days it is still not overpopulated, and you do not have to drive Selous to enjoy the diversity of wildlife – another advantage, which makes Selous unique.

Day 1

The capital of Zanzibar, Stone Town, is on the UNESCO World Heritage List.

Every culture lover will love this diverse city with many Arabic influences. Our guide will tell you all about the rich history of Zanzibar, which is largely characterized by slave trade. You will be taken to the former slave market, the Anglican church, the House of Wonders, the ancient Arab Fort and the birthplace of Freddy Mercury (Queen). Along the way you get to see everything that Zanzibar stands for. On the largest market in the city, the Darajani, you will discover why Zanzibar is famous for its spices.

Also you will visit the meat and fish market on Darajani. The fish is freshly fed by local fishermen and a few times a day it's auctioned on the fish auction. Then the big sale begins in the many small shops that Stone Town is rich. Stone Town consists of a maze of small, narrow streets. The guide will take you through all these narrow streets. You can optionally view the view over Stone Town from a rooftop terrace in one of Zanzibar's hotels.

Already strolling through the small alleys, you will find the most beautiful souvenirs, you see children playing and men playing "bao". This is a local game that is played a lot. All that walking makes thirsty, so you can choose to take a break at Zanzibar Coffee House. As the name already suggests, you can drink good coffee here, but there are plenty of other sweets like fresh juices, cake and sandwiches.

Day 2

On this second day you will get an experience from the work More Africa does. Together with our founder you will visit the school. We will tell you everything about what we do, how we work, about sustainable tourism and the do's and don'ts. After the visit, you will work 2 hours within the NGO. Because of privacy reasons you will NOT work with the children, but you can help with all kinds of other things we do on a normal day, such as watering flowers, making decoration, collecting trash, paint etc etc.

Day 3

On day three you will go to work with our local ladies! You are going to make your own virgin coconut oil! First you smash open the coconut, then grate it, then squeeze the juice, then boil it until the oil remains. You will learn how local women in the villages have been making this oil for generations.

Day 4

On day four you will visit the local village of Jambiani with our guide Ameir. During this experience through Jambiani you pass all kinds of local women's initiatives; seaweed, coconut rope, local clothing, weaving. All women you see during this tour will receive a percentage of the amount you pay to the guide. A very sustainable tour, good for the local community and especially the women!

Enjoy a full day at sea with this combination tour where you visit Prison Island & the sandbank.

About 20 minutes with the boat from Stone Town, you will find Prison Island.

This island is surrounded by a beautiful beach.

Prison Island is named after the prison which was built on the island, but that is never used. Nowadays, you can admire the huge tortoises that are imported from the Seychelles on Prison Island. We are very curious if you can find the oldest tortoise between all those huge animals!

Besides a visit to the turtles, you can also visit the old prison. This is still intact and is used as a restaurant for the visitors who stay at Prison Island. In the toilets, you can still find the chains that were used for chaining the slaves.

After we have visited Prison Island, we get back on the boat and continue our way to the sandbank.

Nakupenda means 'I love you' in Swahili. This sandbank got this name because of its enormous beauty and the fact that many couples who are in love, like to make this tour. With a traditional boat you go from Stone Town to the sandbank. The departure time can be different every day because of the tide. The water is crystal clear and the view on Stone Town is phenomenal. Nature of Zanzibar

Zanzibar has a lot to offer when it comes to nature. Tourism has its positive and negative sides. For example many people visit the dolphin tours, but it looks more as a hunt than that it actually has something to do with nature or sustainability. That is why we don't want to promote these kind of tours. If you want, we can book them for you, but please think twice.

Day 2

On this second day you go to Jozani Forest & Butterfly Centre. Jozani Forest is on the way from Stone Town to the east coast of the island. It is the only National Park on Zanzibar and is approximately 50km² in size.

Jozani Forest is a tourist attraction for nature lovers. It has a large variety of trees and species. During your trip through the woods, under the guidance of a special guide, you will learn about the different trees, such as the mahogany trees.

Also, your guide will take you to the “red colobus monkey”, a monkey species found on Zanzibar only. If you are lucky you can get very close. In addition, you can see 50 different types of butterflies, 40 different types of birds, and sometimes bush babies, chameleons or small antelopes. Leopards could also be seen, which according to a Zanzibari legend have a mythical status. Locals would believe that wizards keep this animal as a pet and scare people by telling stories that they reveal themselves as spirits and then disappear again in nothing. However, since 2003, this species is no longer seen in the park.

After visiting the park, you will go to a nearby mangrove by car. The walk through the mangrove takes you over a beautifully landscaped riser where you can see crabs, depending on the tide. The mangrove is an important breeding ground for many animals such as birds, but also fish. It is currently being investigated whether Jozani Forest and the mangrove can be placed on the World Heritage List.

At 1 km from Jozani you will find the Zanzibar Butterfly Center (ZBC), a netted tropical garden with usually hundreds of butterflies, all of which are native species to Zanzibar. The enclosure is one of Africa's largest butterfly exhibits and provides residents and tourists of Zanzibar with an interactive and visual environment to learn about butterflies.

At ZBC it is possible to experience butterflies feeding and flying very close at hand and to witness the complete life cycle of many species. The butterflies (in pupae form) are farmed sustainably by people from the villages around Jozani Chwaka Bay National Park. The friendly and knowledgeable guides will greet you on your arrival and during the tour will explain the background to the project and about butterfly lifecycle and ecology.

Day 3

On this third day we will go to the Spice Tour. A visit to one of the many spice plantations that Zanzibar knows cannot be missed when you are here. You can find the plantations at a 30 minute ride from the centre of Stone Town.

Zanzibar is still known as the ‘spices island’. Many different things grow and flourish here: vanilla, cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg, coffee, pepper and so on.

Nowadays the spices are no longer the most important source of income, but in the past all spices were exported. The spices came originally from Asia and South-America, but they thrived also good in the tropical climate of Zanzibar.

Some special plantations are made currently to show the tourists what kind of spices and other things grow on Zanzibar. Let yourself immerse in this delicious blend of flavour and taste!

Together with the guide you walk through the plantation. Try to guess what spice the guide is showing you. Your guide will tell you where the spices come from, how it grows and what the effect of the product is.

You will be surprised by the medical effects of many of these spices.

A visit to this ‘spicefarm’ offers you the possibility to buy some spices. You can also buy perfume and balm, which are all made with the spices and support the local community.

You will end the tour with a delicious fruit tasting. After that you can enjoy a delicious local lunch, that is prepared by the women from the community.
